CONFEDERATES TO MARCH IN PARADE

N. B. Forrest Camp Will Be Feature of G. A. R. Pageant at Chattanooga To-Day.

Chattanooga, Tenn., September 16.—Activities of veterans attending the Grand Army of the Republic forty-seventh annual encampment here increased to-day. Business sessions also were begun by several allied organizations meeting simultaneously with the veterans. Interest of all to-night, however, centered in the parade of veterans scheduled for to-morrow morning.

A novel feature of the parade promises to be the participation of N. B. Forrest Camp, United Confederate Veterans. This unexpected innovation resulted from a special invitation extended to the camp to-day by Commander-in-Chief Alfred B. Beers, of the G. A. R., and accepted by Colonel L. T. Dickinson, of the Forrest Camp. The Confederate veterans were invited to wear their gray uniforms.

Lead clouds, which hovered over the city to-day, threatened to cast a damper on plans made for the observation of Chickamauga Day. The pre-arranged parade of veterans was postponed, and the battle of Chickamauga visited the famous battlefield.

Interest in the coming election of officers by the G. A. R. increases rapidly. Several caucuses were held to-day by representatives of various departments. To-night it was generally believed the choice of the next commander-in-chief would be between General E. Adams, of Superior, Neb., and Washington Governor, E. W. Moore, of Petersburg, secretary.

Private Orlando A. Summers, of Kokomo, Ind., to-day was elected president of the Society of the Cumberland in forty-first annual convention.

A resolution was adopted favoring the erection in this city of a peace monument. A similar resolution was adopted three months ago by the United Confederate Veterans at their reunion here.

KING WILL BE SEEN IN MOVING PICTURES

Christian of Denmark Rescues Actress, Who Is Unable to Reach Shore.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENAY.
It is not often that cinematograph concerns, in arranging melodramatic acts and scenarios for reproduction on the films, are enabled to include a real, full-fledged monarch among the professional talent thus represented.

A couple of weeks or so ago King Christian, of Denmark, was cruising along the coast of Jutland on board his steam yacht Rita, with the Queen and their two sons. Suddenly from the other side of a headland loud cries of distress and a number of shots were heard. King Christian, who was on the bridge to make for the spot at full steam.

As the royal yacht rounded the headland, it came upon several boats, or rather barges, such as were used in the seventeenth century, freighted with a number of people arrayed in the costumes of that period, and armed with muskets. In the stern of one of the boats was a beautiful girl, who was weeping and wringing her hands in the most realistic manner.

Suddenly the King caught sight of a cinematograph apparatus in another boat, the operator turning the handle of the machine. Much amused at his mistake, he ordered the yacht to stop, so that he might watch the remainder of the play. In a few minutes the lovely heroine—one of the best known actresses of Copenhagen—tore herself from the restraining hands of those beside her, leaped into the sea, and proceeded to swim ashore.

As she was passing the yacht she uttered a cry of exhaustion, and gave evidence that, hampered by her robes, she would be unable to reach her destination.

King Christian instantly ordered one of the yacht's boats to be lowered, and jumping into it, took the leading part in her rescue. As the cinematograph operator continued all the time to record the scene, King Christian will have a prominent place in the film, though the difference of his own costume and of the sailors manning the boat in which he was rowed to the rescue, will be altogether out of keeping with the seventeenth century garb of the other actors in the drama.

The actress was taken on to the yacht, where Queen Alexandrine and her ladies in waiting hastened to her aid. King Christian, who was with her to the best of their ability with dry clothing, and with badly needed restoratives.

Prince Francois de Polignac and Mlle. Simone de Maille have decided to marry on October 15 as the date of their wedding in Paris. The marriage will unite two of the great ducal and historic houses of France. For the prince is a younger son of the fourth Duc de Polignac, while the bride is a daughter of the late Duc de Plaisance. Her only brother, who died last spring, not long after succeeding to the title, owed his dukedom to the fact that his grandfather, Count Armand de Maille, had married Jeanne Lebrun, only child of Jules Lebrun, second Duke of Plaisance.

The first duke was that Charles Lebrun who, after being deputy to the States General prior to the great Revolution, and later on member of the Council of Five Hundred, was elected first consul when Napoleon became emperor. When Napoleon was proclaimed Emperor in 1804, he created Lebrun Duc de Plaisance, and architect of the empire, subsequently naming him viceroy of Holland. Lebrun's Napoleonic dukedom was confirmed by Louis XVIII. on the restoration, and he was accorded a seat in the Chamber of Peers. He was also appointed by Louis XVIII. grand master of the University of Paris. He was succeeded by his only son, and the latter's daughter, Jeanne, married, in the early days of the reign of Napoleon III., Count Armand de Maille, the Emperor issued letters patent, bearing the date of April 27, 1867, according to which the dukedom of Plaisance was to pass on the second duke's death, to his daughter's husband, Count Armand de Maille.

The De Mailles are one of the oldest families in France, and trace back their descent in an unbroken line to Gauscelm de Maille, who flourished in 1035. The present chief is Duke Arthus de Maille.

With regard to young Prince Francois de Polignac, he owes his title to the fact that since 1838 all the descendants in the male line of the then Duc de Polignac are Bavarian dukes, or princes, in the dukedom of Salm. He is French one, and dates back long prior to the Revolution.

One of the De Polignacs was plenipotentiary of Louis XIV. to the Congress of Utrecht in 1712. Duc Louis de Polignac was Minister of State of Louis XVI. in 1789, and his wife, Duchesse Gabrielle, was the most intimate friend of Queen Marie Antoinette. Their son, after taking part in the Royalist insurrection in the Vendee, and being imprisoned by Napoleon in 1804, was confined in 1835 his sentence was commuted to one of exile. The present Duc de Polignac is his grandson.

One of the brothers of the late duke, namely, Prince Edmond de Polignac, married, in 1893, Vincennes Singer, of New York, daughter of the late Isaac Singer, of sewing machine celebrity. She is now a widow.

His brother, Prince Camille de Polignac, who served in the Confederate Army during the War of the Union, up to the rank of major-general, married, in 1864, at the Cathedral of the Madeleine, a Miss de la Bretesche, a native of New Orleans, and daughter of a very wealthy Louisiana of the name of Le Bretesche, who was engaged in extensive enterprises, both in New Orleans and throughout the South, prior to the war.

De la Bretesche was ruined by the latter, and Prince Camille thereupon took advantage of the plea that he had failed to secure the consent of his own parents to his marriage to Mlle. de la Bretesche, in order to obtain its invalidation by the French courts, whereupon he married an enormously wealthy Austrian heiress, Marie Langenberger, who settled upon him a million francs on the day of the wedding. After Prince Camille's second marriage, his discarded New Orleans wife married a Roumanian diplomat of the name of Vranas. The latter died a couple of years later, but the union had at least this effect, that it placed his widow beyond all reach of starvation, since it brought her a pension of $50 a month from the Roumanian government.

On her demise, the son whom she had borne to Prince Camille de Polignac sought the assistance of his father to secure for him some position in the consular or diplomatic service, being without means. The prince, however, contented himself with offering his son—who had been forbidden by law to bear his name—a place as workman in a factory, and then as salesman in one of the great drygoods stores in Paris, declining any other form of assistance; and by way of adding insult to injury, expressing doubts as to whether he was really the young fellow's father, and questioning the honor of the mother.

This drove young De la Bretesche to desperation, and visiting Prince Camille's house in Paris during his absence, he saturated the curtains of his rooms with petroleum and set them alight. Arrested, and charged with arson, the young man explained in court that he had merely set the curtains on fire in order to attract attention to his wrongs, and was in consequence thereof acquitted, the jury, court and public manifesting a strong feeling against the prince.

Baldwin-Kyle.
Farmville, Va., September 16.—A pretty wedding was solemnized on Tuesday evening at 6:30 o'clock in the Methodist Episcopal Church, this city, when Miss Caroline Kyle became the bride of Frank Grayson Baldwin. The pastor of the church, Rev. Dudley Boogher, performed the ceremony. Previous to the ceremony delightful organ music was rendered by Miss Alice Burgess.

The ushers were William Dunnington and Gray Paulett, and Miss Martha Bug, sister of the bride, and Miss Lucile Baldwin, sister of the groom, were bridesmaids. The maid of honor was Miss Hattie Bug.

The bride entered with her father, Fred M. Bug. She wore a gown of French crepe and rose point lace, with ornaments of pearls. She wore a crest of pearls and diamonds, the gift of the groom. Her veil of lace and net was arranged with orange blossoms. She carried a bride's bouquet of roses, lilies, and carnations. The bridesmaids wore white dresses and carried white bouquets. The groom entered from the vestry with his brother, Linwood Baldwin, of Durham, N. C.

After the ceremony the bridal couple left for an automobile tour through Maine. On their return they will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred M. Bug.

WHITE SLAVE CASE COMES UP TO-DAY

Sam Franklin Will Be Tried in Federal Court for Violating Law.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Lynchburg, Va., September 16.—The white slave case against Sam Franklin, who is charged with inducing a white woman to go to the cavalry camp at Winchester, will come to trial in the Federal District Court to-morrow morning at 9:30 o'clock.

The woman in the case has been under detention by the government since the arrest of Franklin in Frederick County early in July. She was here last week to appear before the grand jury, but when the case was fixed for trial to-morrow she was taken back to Washington to the house of detention in the District Court here.

Recently there have been some developments of the government's side of the case which promise to be of an interesting character when these facts are brought out in the hearing of the evidence.

The case promises to be stubbornly contested by Franklin's attorneys, and it will be the first charge of the kind ever tried in the District Court here.

Addition to Barn.
Thomas F. Ryan is having an addition built to his famous dairy barn on the Oak Ridge estate in Nelson County, which will practically double the capacity of the barn, thus giving it facilities for 100 milch cows. The new addition adds fifty-four stalls, and will make it, according to dairy experts, the finest dairy plant in America. The building, together with all of its equipment, including electric light plant, ice plant and cold storage, represents an outlay of about $110,000, outside of the milch cows of the estate.

Nearing Completion.
The new ten-room brick school building erected by the town of Amherst Courthouse is nearing completion, and it is expected that the building can be occupied early in October. The contract time for the completion of the building is October 1, but it is not expected to be completed until several days after that. The building has cost $15,000. It will be heated by hot air, and it is equipped with modern ventilating apparatus.

The body of a newly-born white male child, which was wrapped in a towel, was found this morning in a James River here, the child having been dead a day or two. It is believed that the body was collected in city garbage. The police have commenced an investigation.

A large number of Confederate veterans from various sections of the State, who arrived here on the morning of early afternoon trains, left later for Roanoke to attend the annual reunion which begins in the Magic City to-morrow morning.

The session of the Virginia Christian College begins this morning, with less than a hundred students registered during the day. Others will arrive during the week, and it is hoped the enrollment next week will be up to 100.

Cadiz, Ky.—"I was in a terrible condition, caused from nervousness," says Mrs. Boon Sanders, of this place. "At times, last spring and summer, I did not get any rest at night; could not sleep at all.
